

A museum display set within a mine gallery. The background is a rough, layered rock wall. A metal grid structure is in the foreground. Two wooden-handled pickaxes are crossed in an 'X' shape, mounted on the grid. Several green grapevines with clusters of grapes are also mounted on the grid. The scene is lit with a greenish light.

RICHES OF BEIRA INTERIOR
From ore to wine

The looks don't remain indifferent over the Vines planted up to 700 meters above sea level - the highest wine-growing region of Portugal. And what the eyes can't see, fits in your taste to delight - including wines matured in deactivated mine galleries of tin and wolfram, 50 meters from depth.
